

Abstract

During a solution heat treatment grain recrystallization may occur of a textured article, especially at the surface rim.

5

The present invention provides a method for restoring the microstructure of a textured article, which comprises coating the surface of the article with a high temperature stable surface coating or by a controlled development of an oxide scale and subsequently performing a solution heat treatment, thereby maintaining said thermally stable surface coating.

10

15